

Worried about dealing with health needs in school?

The pressure for support staff to administer medicines and give medical support to pupils keeps growing.

Statutory guidance means schools must have suitable policies in place and staff providing medical support must have received suitable training.

- Can I refuse an instruction to give medical support?
- What if I feel bullied into it?
- What if I am refused the right kind of training or retraining?
- Am I protected if something goes wrong?
- My job is now more complex due to the medical support I provide. Can I ask for a pay review?

For the answers to these questions, join UNISON for a copy of our guidance. Speak to your local UNISON rep or find out more at unison.org.uk/education.

UNISON supporting you, supporting children

My local contact

Three simple ways to join UNISON today:

Join online at joinunison.org

Call us on 0800 171 2193

Ask your UNISON rep
for an application form